

we are hiring digital journalist

Calling all news junkies! The 'Buzzfeed for Baby Boomers' is seeking a journalist/reporter with the magic combination of traditional newswriting skills and plenty of digital savvy to join its fun, fast-paced newsroom. If this sounds like you, read on for the key info.

Starts at 60

- Is a scale-up that caters to the largest, wealthiest and fastest-growing reader demographic in the world – the 60-plus
- Has serious media cred (Mumbrella's 2017 Media Brand of the Year, Brandata's #1 Seniors Influencer)
- Publishes a mix of soft and not-so-soft current affairs plus original features content on our sites and social media channels
- Has a close-knit multimedia content team that never tires of using the latest tech to create new ways to connect with the audience
- Offers an ambitious journalist the opportunity to have a significant voice in the company and make a real difference in the world of digital media

You

- Have at least three years' newsroom experience in a digital-focused role (a degree in journalism/media/communications is preferable but nothing beats experience!)
- Are a total news fiend who's as comfortable with tabloid fodder as international politics
- Love engaging an audience on social media, whether it be via text, video, imagery or a mix of all three and more
- Have a great grasp of traditional reporting skills – newswriting, interviewing, building contacts and breaking original stories
- Enjoy a fast-paced work environment and the flexibility a small newsroom requires

The job

- Is a permanent, full-time one at our Brisbane HQ, with some shifts outside office hours and on weekends
- Offers competitive remuneration depending on experience

Submit your application (including at minimum a letter or statement plus a resume) to admin@starts60.com and let us know why you stand out from the crowd!
